

KITHKIN PRESENTS

DESIGNERSBLOCK TOKYO

31 October - 4 November 2007

Following on from the distinct success at Designersblock London, Kithkin is exporting their unique selection, and London insight to Tokyo. The exhibition is presented in a shipping container, with a variety of strange objects and ideas being unpacked and displayed on cardboard boxes.

Featuring sixteen designers and artists from some of the most prestigious universities in London, KithKin Presents is a unique journey into the tastes and influences of two young design graduates. It is a selection of their friends and colleagues work that has influenced and excited them throughout the last few months.

Curated by Ian Atkins & Joss Debae, KithKin Presents was organized to show people conceptual design at its most fun, dangerous and at times even impractical. This is an exhibition from humble beginnings, communally organized, featuring several young designers and made possible by friendship and passion.

KithKin is a collective of artists and designers dedicated to working, learning and expressing ideas in a environment full of collaboration and free from boundaries.

The name is derived from old English word Kith (meaning family) and Kin (meaning friend). Drawing upon its family members skills and experience, KithKin provides services that range from events organisation to creative consultancy and web design to product design.
